

André den Exter

André den Exter has a PhD degree in law. The title of his dissertation was “Health care law-making in Central and Eastern Europe: Review of a legal-theoretical model”. Since 2002, he has been appointed as senior lecturer in Health law and European law at the Erasmus University Rotterdam. His research focuses on topics like access to health care, health insurance law and the influence of European treaty law. He wrote various articles, and (co)edited several books on these issues.